Claims 1-11 are allowed over the prior art.

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: In the examiner's opinion, the allowable subject matter in this case is a retractable handle bar having the first locking member removable engaging the lower positioning hole of the central receiving seat in the closed position and removable engaging the upper positioning hole of the central receiving seat in the opened position and an inner sleeve slidably inserted into the outer sleeve having two struts, each of the two struts being pivotally connected to the central receiving seat at a first end and a pair of wheels at a second end, two links, each link pivotally connected to a central portion of one of the two struts at a first link end and a bottom wall of the outer sleeve at a second link end, wherein the two struts and two links are inserted into the two openings in the central receiving seat when the outer sleeve of the handle is in the closed position in combination with the other elements recited not anticipated by the prior art, nor would it have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in this art.
